

Jennifer Lawson practices law in Nashville, handling a broad range of complex civil litigation including contract disputes, trade secrets litigation, officers' and directors' liability issues, copyright and trademark infringement, entertainment law matters, and business bankruptcy representation and litigation. She has extensive experience in litigation in federal and state courts and in alternative dispute resolution. She provides advice regarding corporate governance issues to for-profit and nonprofit boards of directors. Ms. Lawson is a former member of Lassiter, Tidwell, Davis, Keller & Hogan, PLLC, where she represented clients as diverse as alcohol beverage distributors, hospitality firms, non-profit corporations and internationally renowned entertainers in complex litigation and bankruptcy matters and landowners in condemnation and eminent domain proceedings.

Ms. Lawson received a B.A. degree from Carson-Newman College in 1988, where she was an Honors and Dean's List graduate. She earned a J.D. degree from the University of Tennessee College of Law in 1991, where she was on the Dean's List and active in the Student Bar Association and Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity.

Ms. Lawson is married. She attends First Baptist Church and is involved in community organizations in Historic Old Hickory Village. Ms. Lawson has volunteered as a poll watcher and has been involved in various political campaigns. She is a member of the Tennessee Bar Association, Nashville Bar Association (including the Bankruptcy Practice Committee and a former board member of the Solo and Small Firm Committee), Lawyers' Association for Women and a founding member of the Tennessee network of the International Women's Insolvency and Restructuring Confederation (IWIRC).